SHENANDOAH VALLEY

SWARMS

of Witches, Wizards and other magical folk have descended on the city ahead of this year's magic festival, and in keeping with all the latest fashion trends, all were adorned in an eye-catching array of INVISIBILITY CLOAKS newly bought from local wizard tailors Edward Jones In Vestments.

Downtown businesses in Staunton have lately become inundated by A PLAGUE OF ACROMANTULAS forcing restaurateurs to relocate their patrons al-fresco, as indoor dining has become unsuitable amongst man-eating arachnids. Their MYSTERIOUS arrival has prompted predictable pointings-of-fingers at notorious witch Sarah Lynch of the Baja Bean Co. who was suspiciously unavailable for comment when approached by our correspondent.

The Magical Congress this week are anticipated to announce plans to facilitate long distance or at-home learning for all students within the jurisdiction of the Office for Magic Relations and Education. Our New York reporter can exclusively reveal that the plan involves providing A PENSIEVE FOR EVERY HOUSEHOLD

Professors will capture their lessons as memories from previous semesters, and send the vials by owl to their whole class for safer, contact-free learning. Funding for the program is expected to come from the defunct international student exchange schemes.

While donations are always welcomed at the Habitat for Humanity Restore, an anonymously gifted enchanted box was found to contain ILLEGALLY IMPORTED FIRECRABS

Whereupon opening, the terrified testudinidae released the power of their defensive derrieres causing significant fire damage to the store. Until further notice, only monetary donations can now be accepted.
